

Story Of Self

Hi my name is Robert , and today i will be discussing about my story on how i got involved in the Path to a Tech career. The reason i got involved in the tech world was for my older brother who motivated me to love computers just by me watching him build computers. Which molded me to who i am today but i was not satisfied with just building computers i wanted to learn code. The more i got involved into coding on site of knowledge house and off site. One of my strengths that i have to offer to the tech industry Since i am not a quitter. if there is a problem with my code i will do what it takes to solve the issue. Being creative is who i am as a person therefore since i have that mind state i can really make simple but interactive websites once i gain the skills and knowledge. The areas that i am interested in the tech world is really frontend and backend and creating a program myself or with a team so we can grow as a whole. Hopefully in the near future i will have all the fundamental skills in front end a little back end and in the long term goal is to be working as a developer.
